Contact wins at Techworld Awards 2007

Contact, one of the UK's leading providers of Telecoms and IT services, proudly announces that it has won the Infrastructure of the Year award at the Techworld Awards held on Wednesday 27th June 2007. The event which is held in recognition of market leading products and services saw a substantial number of the UK's leading brands vying for awards including T-Mobile, BT, Siemens and Blackberry. Contact triumphed with their Next Generation Product which entailed a full replacement of their existing network infrastructure at British Standards Institute (BSI), which encompasses the ISO and Kitemark, one of the top three most recognised brands in the UK. The product covered many new technologies from Hosted telecoms to SIP trunking, which was built on a solid LAN and WAN infrastructure from market leading vendors. Contact Ltd's managing director commented "To be recognised at the UK's leading technology awards ceremony for a major infrastructure project at one of the UK's most respected companies is an achievement we are all proud of at Contact and one which we feel reflects our ability to deliver cutting edge technology solutions with excellent delivery and support."
